YES.

Two officers on the Board of Directors, head Director Anna Bramucci and board officer Stephan Bramucci are siblings. This relationship has no bearing on the activities of the board and in no way obligates either party to act or vote in a particular way. The two key employees listed Sara McGowan and Brian Crites were recently married and this also has no bearing on the activities they perform with the World Children's Project or with La Paz Community School. These key employees were listed here because of their devotion to the project and the plan to expand interactions with them in the future; however, they have no privileges on the Board of Directors and do not vote, hold office, or influence activities in any way at this time.

Activities performed by La Pas Community School under the name of World Children's Project. These activities directly complete the World Children's Project's official goals and public charity objectives as described in the 2004 non-profit documents. Along with the activities is an estimation of how much money from the World Children's Project went toward each of the divisions during the accounting period from May 1, 2007 to April 30, 2008.

Money allotted each activity:

7500 for classroom construction

7000 for scholarship

3164 for books, art supplies, sports equipment, etc.
